Message from the President

Jamaican Self-Help has had another outstanding year both in our projects in Jamaica and here in Canada working to increase awareness of third world issues.

Members of the program committee have travelled to Jamaica two times to closely monitor the work in education, training and community development. During these visits, we also make connections with the Jamaican government and with people working in the aid sector in Jamaica.

Our global education committee in Peterborough continues its work sending youth to Jamaica for volunteer experience, bringing guest speakers, and linking with local agencies working on like-minded issues. A vibrant link with youth was established this year with the Make Poverty History project. A conference linking Canadian, Jamaican and Nicaraguan youth is also in the planning stages.

Our 15-member board oversees the organization and its four standing committees. Faithful donors also support our appeals and the annual Brunch and Auction. Funds for the work are always needed and new fundraising initiatives are being developed.

I would like to thank our many donors, our tireless staff, volunteers, committees and board members for their diligence and generosity.

President

JAMAICAN PROGRAMME

“Youth, Education & Leadership” - April 2007 ~ March 2008

The past year was marked with a variety of challenges to development work in Jamaica. Highlights of the year included:

- ❖ National Elections: the Jamaica Labour Party (JLP) became the minority government in September 2007, defeating the People’s National Party (PNP) for the first time since 1989. The change in government appeared to have brought a sense of hope to the country.
- ❖ Hurricane Dean – a Category 4 hurricane caused destruction in many parts of the country in September – notably in the rural area of St. Mary where the banana and vegetable crops were most affected. Banana production resumed by spring 2008, but only for the domestic market.
- ❖ The national Grade Six Achievement Test (GSAT) results in June 2007 indicated that 40% of Grade 6 students who sat the exam were below the required level. The Transformation Team of the Ministry of Education continued to work on various strategies to improve literacy.
- ❖ Violence in the schools was a problem across Jamaica, and also in some JSH communities. Partners indicated that violence has never been so high, and particularly worrisome is the random nature of the attacks – now during the daytime, against women and children and “informants” (perceived or real).
- ❖ The global rise in oil and food prices affected Jamaica as well; poor Jamaicans in particular suffered from rising prices in fuel, food, electricity, transportation.

Over the year, Jamaican Self-Help continued to support programmes of six Jamaican partner organizations, and explored new partnerships.

St. Peter Claver Primary School upheld its excellent reputation through its literacy and extra-curricular activities. In addition to the sports teams and music programme, the school extended its programme to include a wider range of clubs such as brownies, cub scouts and arts & crafts in order to include more children. Parents were included through workshops, parent-teacher meetings and other activities. The school offered a secure and positive environment for all the students despite instability in the community. The entire school population of close to 1000 students benefited from the various activities this past year.

Down the street S-Corner Clinic and Community Development Organization encountered a number of challenges over the year as they coped with several outbreaks of violence in the community. They shifted some programmes to better address community needs and to keep staff and volunteers safe. They continued to offer innovative activities that defied the fear created by gang activity, and maintained hope for the larger community. Health education, youth programmes, peace building activities and grief counselling, and parenting sessions assisted over 3000 people in the Bennet Lands area.

St. Margaret’s Human Resources Centre encountered different challenges this year. While Hurricane Dean did not have a direct impact on Jamaica, there was a great deal of damage in pockets throughout the island including in Kingston. At St. Margaret’s, a huge tree was knocked over onto the Community Library. The clean up and repair work was done quickly however, and the library was again used by students and community members for homework assignments or reading. JSH supported the library, and two vocational training programmes – the garment construction course and the woodworking course. Altogether, over 300 students benefited from these activities this year.

A second Vocational Training project, St. Pius X Training Centre, saw 24 young women and men graduate in June 2007 from one of three skills training courses – garment construction, cosmetology, or catering, as well as literacy and life skills sessions. Another 20 students enrolled in the 2007-08 school year. The Centre faced some management challenges over the year, yet the courses maintained their high standards as evidenced by the quality of the work produced.

St. Theresa's Literacy Project located in St. Mary parish was originally established by two Canadian nuns. This project was made the responsibility of a Board of local Jamaican teachers and community leaders during this past year. With their leadership, the programme continued to flourish, providing remedial reading classes to primary school children in three rural schools. Over 300 children benefitted from these activities. The Board attempted to offer a literacy programme to students at the Annotto Bay High School as well. Although a few students did benefit, it was decided to move this project to another school – the Enfield Primary and Junior High School - in the fall of 2008.

St. Anne's Community of Concern undertook a variety of activities – from youth-at-risk programmes to a women's sewing project to a community social concerns group. Over this past year, the Co-ordinator of the project worked on a proposal to the government to shift the high school to an innovative new model for identified at-risk students. After the national elections, his efforts were successful and a new high school model will be phased in over the next few years. Consequently, JSH support for youth programmes in that community will be phased out, as they are integrated into the new high school curriculum.

Through the “replication project,” JSH extended its support at St. Anne's Primary School from the dance programme and after-school remedial reading project, to a co-operative play programme and the addition of a social worker for the school to assist with identified at-risk children. There was good progress in all these areas over the year, benefiting all 539 students.

Also through the “replication project”, JSH approached another school, Whitfield All Ages School and instituted a cooperative play programme at that school. JSH then approached Tavares Gardens Primary School, and worked with the principal to identify a suitable programme to improve attendance of its student population of 250. Using the successful model of St. Peter Claver Primary School, JSH agreed to fund a small music project: recorder classes for students in Grades 3 to 5. The programme was initiated in early 2008, and to date appears to be a positive addition to the school.

Since this is the second year of a three-year funded programme with CIDA, JSH began its evaluation process with its partners as a first step towards developing its plans for 2009 and beyond. A meeting was held with representatives of all six partner organizations in November to gather information about successes and challenges, current issues in Jamaica, and recommendations for future directions for JSH. This information, together with ongoing dialogue with the partners and other key Jamaican resources, will be incorporated into the plan for JSH programmes to 2012.

CANADIAN PROGRAMME

“Youth, Education & Leadership” - April 2007 ~ March 2008

Jamaican Self-Help has been busy with youth engagement and public education this year.

The JSH Make Poverty History Youth Committee was involved in several activities such as:

- Participating in the provincial Global Citizen’s Forum organized by the Ontario Council for International Cooperation
- Meeting with MP Dean Del Mastro to discuss Bill C-293 (More and Better Aid)
- Organization of workshops for other youth
- Involvement in JSH’s strategic planning process.

The committee has become an important of the organization and JSH is proud of its accomplishments.

The Ganley Lecture this year featured Fabian Brown from Jamaica. Fabian is the CEO of St. Joseph’s Hospital in Kingston, Jamaica and the Director of Development at St. Patrick’s Foundation, one of Jamaican Self-Help’s long-time Jamaican partners. In his presentation, Fabian made an impassioned plea for Canadians and Jamaicans alike to use their talents to create a better world. Fabian also travelled to Ottawa to meet with CIDA and make a public presentation on youth and development.

JSH was active with the Ontario Council for International Co-operation and the Canadian Council for International Co-operation. Both councils offer many opportunities for NGOs to share their experiences and contribute to the provincial and national discussions on global development. JSH was selected as one of four organizations across Canada to participate in a Public Engagement Evaluation Project. A special committee of JSH youth and youth leaders learned how to apply participatory evaluation to its youth programmes.

Other activities:

- Authors Pamela Mordecai and Nan Peacocke did a presentation in May 2007
- Jamaican Consul General Anne-Marie Bonner spoke at the Annual General Meeting in June
- Canada Day Parade in Peterborough
- Co-sponsorships of the Person’s Day Breakfast, Annual Travelling World Film Festival, the One World Dinner and the Dub Trinity Concert in recognition of International Development Week
- Inclusion workshop for JSH volunteers and Board
- Youth Awareness trip in March 2008
- Outreach to youth in Norwood and Lindsay
